

OPEC deadlocked on oil price hike

VIENNA, Austria (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries failed today to break a deadlock over the size of a proposed oil increase but oil ministers said they hoped to reach agreement Friday.

Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the Saudi Arabian oil minister, vowed he would "never" accept more than a 5 per cent increase and then unexpectedly left the meeting an hour early and flew to London.

An OPEC spokesman denied that Yamani had walked out.

"His trip to London is a purely private visit that had been arranged earlier, and he will return in time for Friday's meeting," the spokesman said. As Yamani departed, some ministers said the conference was nearing a compromise on an oil price increase of between 7 and 10 per cent.

"We are far away from a decision," Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabian oil minister who has been opposing an increase, told reporters.

"There is a complete difference of opinion. We are facing terrible opposition," Yamani, looking grim, left the five-hour meeting an hour before it ended.

Other ministers came out later and confirmed that the talks are still deadlocked. They said the meeting would resume at 10 a.m. Friday.

Yamani vowed he never would accept more than a 5 per cent increase.

Nigerian Minister Mofia Tonjo Akobo, however, said Yamani had not insisted in the meeting on holding to 5 per cent.

"I think he left early to consult his government," Akobo said. He predicted the conference would agree on an increase Friday of about 10 per cent.

Venezuelan Minister Valentin Hernandez-Acosta said, "We are nearer an agreement than ever." He predicted an increase of 7 to 8 per cent and said there would be no change in premium prices that some countries with high quality oil are allowed to charge.

The premium prices affect such countries as Indonesia, Libya and Nigeria. If they are unchanged, this would cushion the effect of any increase in the OPEC benchmark price, the $10.46 per barrel now charged for Saudi Arabian crude.

Yamani said he had lost his fight to continue the nine-month-old price freeze. "It is not a question of a price freeze now — it is a question of how much," he said.

Asked if he thought the conference would agree on an increase of less than 10 per cent, he replied, "If we don't, then there will be no agreement."

He said Iraq and Iran are leading the fight for an increase and are supported by Gabon, Algeria, and Libya.

THE HOTTEST JOB IN TOWN yesterday had to be the occupation of Earl Brooks, who applied a coating of tar to roof of home on East Locust Avenue during height of Lompoc's first heat wave of the summer. Temperatures ranged near 100 in the city and above the century mark inland.

State links oil drilling to smog

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Proposed federal offshore oil drilling could ultimately cause as much smog as nine million additional cars in Southern California and have "disastrous" effects on air quality, the state reported today.

The Air Resources Board said that drilling, shipment and processing of offshore oil under proposed federal leasing plans could be enough in itself — even if there was no other source of pollution in the greater Los Angeles area — to prevent the state from achieving acceptable air quality standards.

The board said its toughest-in-the-nation exhaust emission standards would be "overwhelmed."

In an analysis of the environmental impact statement for the offshore drilling program on the outer continental shelf, the board called for the elimination of some proposed drilling tracts and other modifications in the federal plan to ease the smog problem.

Board Chairman Tom Quinn computed that 150 to 200 tons of hydrocarbons would spew into the skies of Southern California as the result of the new drilling, considering the maximum federal estimate of one million barrels of oil a day from the proposed fields.

Patty 'prime suspect' in other bank heist

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Authorities consider Patricia Hearst a prime suspect in an armed robbery and murder at a bank in Carmichael, Calif., according to news reports. The reports said money taken in the robbery was found in the house where the newspaper heiress was arrested last week.

CBS News reported Wednesday that Miss Hearst "closely resembles the composite drawing of one of the robbers sketched from witnesses' descriptions."

The network also said "...part of the stolen money marked for identification was found during the search of the house where Miss Hearst had been living when she was arrested."

The San Francisco Chronicle reported today that "at least one bill" taken in the robbery was found in the house.

U.S. Attorney James L. Browning refused to confirm or deny the report. He said the matter was not in the "public domain" in current legal action against SLA members.

The bank, near Sacramento, Calif., was robbed of $15,000 April 21 by four persons, including a young woman. During the holdup, a bystander, Myrna Lee Opsahl, was killed.

CBS reporter Richard Threlkeld said authorities "later found the getaway car and on its license plates reportedly discovered the fingerprints of Steve Soliah."

Soliah, 27, a house painter with whom Miss Hearst said she lived, was indicted Wednesday on federal charges of harboring a fugitive and being an accessory after the fact. Bail was set at $75,000.

Miss Hearst, 21, and fellow SLA members Wendy Yoshimura, William Harris and his wife Emily were captured last Thursday at two houses in the Mission District. Miss Hearst had been kidnapped by the SLA on Feb. 4, 1974, but later announced through tape recordings that she was joining her captors.

Investigators said Wednesday James Kilgore, 27, was wanted in connection with the bank robbery in Carmichael and that a raid on his Daly City apartment turned up bombs, shotguns, a revolver and revolutionary literature.

— Miss Hearst changed her jail occupational listing from "urban guerrilla" to "not employed." Her attorney, Terence Hallinan, said she used the term when she was booked into the jail Thursday because she "felt pressured and couldn't think of anything else."

An expert on the psychiatry of mad murderers spent two hours interviewing Patty Hearst at the direction of a federal judge who wants to know if she is sane, the sheriff's office disclosed today.

Dr. Donald Lunde quietly slipped into the San Mateo County Jail Wednesday and held a visit with Patty in a conference room. Assistant Sheriff Eugene Stewart said.

Patty "went willingly" from her cell to see the court-appointed psychiatrist. "She never presents any problems," Stewart said. He said the conversation between Miss Hearst and Dr. Lunde was not tape recorded.

U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter appointed Lunde and two other psychiatric experts to examine Miss Hearst to determine whether she is in a mental condition to be tried.

Lunde, 38, is a psychiatrist on the faculty of Stanford University. He is an expert on the mentality of murderers, giving testimony during the trials of John Frazier, Edmund Kemper and Herbert Mullen, three young men found guilty of slaying a total of 26 persons between 1970 and 1973.

He has written a book, "Murder and Madness," in which he says the mental state of criminals "is always the crucial element."

Meanwhile, authorities were investigating whether Miss Hearst may have been one of four robbers who held up a Carmichael, Calif., bank. Money taken in the holdup was reportedly found in the house where the newspaper heiress was captured.

Dr. Margaret Thaler Singer, a clinical psychologist at the University of California, was named to administer any tests desired by the team. She said it was believed Miss Hearst's examination would begin this week.

Miss Hearst's lawyers filed an affidavit Tuesday detailing what happened to her after her kidnap. She signed it. The statement said that she was the victim of "brainwashing" tactics and drug-ging. These actions by her captors, she said, pushed her to insanity.

Harrises arraigned in LA

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Leonard Weinglass, one of the defense lawyers at the Daniel Ellsberg trial, was chosen today as a defense lawyer for accused Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists Emily and William Harris.

Harris and his wife were arraigned in Los Angeles Municipal Court after being brought under heavy security guard from San Francisco, where they were arrested with Patricia Hearst one week ago today. They were ordered held in lieu of $500,000 bail.

Municipal Court Judge Eric E. Younger, son of California Attorney General Evelle J. Younger, set Oct. 8 for a preliminary hearing in the case in which the Harrises face 18 felony charges, including kidnapping, robbery, assault with a deadly weapon and assault with intent to kill.

Weinglass, who represented co-defendant Anthony Russo at the Ellsberg trial, was chosen counsel for Mrs. Harris. Public defender Edward Rucker was named the main lawyer for Harris.

The Harrises, captured a week ago today along with Patricia Hearst, were brought into the municipal courtroom without handcuffs and placed in a section separated from the main part of the room by a wood and glass panel.

Both stood quietly during the brief proceedings. When Judge Younger asked Mrs. Harris if that was her true name, she replied, "yes," and when the same question was put to Harris, he said, "right."

Neither of the Harrises said anything else during the brief arraignment and were not seen speaking to each other.

Weinglass told the judge Harris' life had been threatened by officers during the past 24 hours and that security arrangements were excessive. He urged reduction of bail but Judge Younger declined to lower it.

Following the arraignment, Weinglass expanded to reporters on the alleged threat against Harris. He said Harris told him that while he was sitting in a car at the San Francisco Airport, a deputy said that "if he moved more than five feet away, the deputy would shoot and kill him on sight."

The Harrises arrived separately at the County Arraignment Courts Building, Emily first in a four-car sheriff's caravan and her husband five minutes later in a similar police caravan.

Mrs. Harris appeared sleepy and subdued as she stepped out of a sheriff's vehicle and was escorted to an elevator which took her to the municipal courtroom floor where the arraignment was scheduled later this morning. Dressed in a white smock blouse, green pants and black tennis shoes, she stared briefly at the scores of reporters and photographers on hand, then looked down as she was led to the elevator.

She mouthed something that was unintelligible to reporters.

The bearded Harris, wearing a yellow shirt, tan pants and casual shoes, stared arrogantly at reporters but said nothing.

Security at the courts building was extremely tight for the arraignment of the Harrises who were flown here from San Francisco late Wednesday night.

Sheriff's officers and county marshals surrounded the building, two helicopters hovered overhead and news representatives had to go through tight security checks, including electronic metal detectors.

The building was searched Wednesday night and again this morning for possible bombs.

Court puts off ruling on sale of water firm

A court ruling whether the Mission Hills Water Co. shall continue to be prevented from selling the assets of the company has been postponed until the middle of October, according to Terence G. Kuchel, a Santa Maria attorney representing Mission Hills home owners suing the company.

The home owners have obtained in Superior Court a temporary restraining order which blocks the sale of the water company assets. The October ruling will decide whether the sale of the assets should be prevented until the suit is settled.

Those challenging magnate Anton C. Garnier for control of Mission Hills Water Co. claim they are the rightful owners and were deceived in the early 1950's in thinking they bought collective control of the company with their property.

Center is George Perozzi, the '74-'75 chapter chairman. Some 19 riders participated in the recent event and Stock collected over $2,000 which represents more than half of the money raised. The reason for his success, Stock explained, is that he is a bartender and most of his sponsors are his customers. This week Stock was honored at an installation and awards dinner meeting. Barnes was elected chapter president for the '75-'76 period.

Fire patrols alerted as valley swelters

The county's fire danger alert teams patrolled Lompoc and Santa Ynez Valleys through the night in the wake of torrid temperatures and five brush fires.

No new fires were reported, but county officials warned of extreme fire danger in the tinder dry hills and mountains. County firefighters spread themselves thin yesterday throwing firebreak rings around brush fires on the Hollister, San Julian and Cojo ranches and around two fires east of Santa Maria. The exact acreage which was blackened was still being compiled today.

No one was injured and no homes were threatened.

Temperatures ranged from 109 degrees at Holmdahl Farm Supply on Miguelito Canyon Road, to 92 degrees at Lompoc Fire Department on South G Street, and 96 degrees at Lompoc's Water Treatment Plant on East North Ave.

Water Treatment Plant supervisor

Dale Batchelor reported city dwellers opened their taps yesterday to use more than five million gallons of water. The plant has a daily capacity of about seven million gallons and that much has been used on occasions in previous years, Batchelor said. Average daily use through the year is about three million gallons.

Elsewhere, temperatures matched the sweep of Santa Ana winds through the Southland. Officials at Santa Maria Airport registered a high of 99 degrees yesterday. At Santa Ynez Airport, 25 miles east of Lompoc, there was a high of 103 degrees at 11:30 a.m.

Soft drink, beer and ice cream sales were reported yesterday as a sweltering public sought relief.

There was one encouraging note. A sheriff's deputy in Solvang said the thermometer on his home patio registered 38 degrees this morning, to give perhaps a portent of winter just around the corner of the calendar.

School employees OK 6 per cent pay offer

Non-teaching members of the California School Employees Association last night accepted a six per cent across the board salary raise ending months of dispute.

The association's negotiating committee was to meet with assistant Supt. Alice Milligan at 1 p.m. today. Milligan's okay was considered routine, but necessary.

Members met at Lompoc Junior High School last night and reportedly voted to accept the raise by a two-thirds majority as required by their bylaws. About 290 employees are affected.

The action ends a stalemate that has existed since July 1 when the workers refused to accept the board's offer that ranged from 2.2 per cent for some to 13.79 for others.

The association represents custodians, secretaries, clerks, gardeners, mechanics and other non-teaching personnel.

During the months of negotiations the two sides met many times in vain and finally submitted their dispute to a session with a state conciliator. That latter effort also ended in failure.

Last Tuesday, a field representative of the CSEA made an impassioned plea for the association members in an appearance before trustees of Lompoc Unified School District.

The board listened, but declined to take any action. Later that night, the association officials and Milligan met for more than an hour and came forth as deadlocked as ever.

An estimated 100 members were on hand last night when the vote was taken.

The six per cent is similar to raises already granted teachers.

Pollution question delays plant review

By CARY ENGLISH
County reporter

Consideration of Exxon's precise plan for its onshore Las Flores oil facilities has been delayed for seven weeks until Nov. 12.

The County Planning Commission must determine that Exxon's precise plan conforms with the general plan approved by the Board of Supervisors before it may begin construction.

Commission member Mrs. Peter Bratt (Goleta) moved for the continuance yesterday because there is no report from the Air Pollution Control District (APCD) that it will meet air standards, which she said is the "primary consideration of the people of the South Coast."

Also, she added, the plant is being appealed to the Coastal Commission, which could alter plans for the facilities. Exxon had asked for a time extension to delay beginning construction on the plant after the plan is approved. This, she felt, indicated that the oil company is in "no great

County planners turn down requests for lot splits

By CARY ENGLISH
County reporter

Trying to avoid the social impact of new lot splits in agricultural areas, county planning commissioners were confronted yesterday with the human cost of denying them.

"When we bought this land five years ago with the intention that my father could build a small house in the back and retire," James Duncan told the commissioners, "we had no idea of the political climate involved in the decision."

Duncan was seeking county approval to split his 10-acre parcel near Santa Ynez into two five-acre lots.

Commission member Thomas G. Nielsen, speaking against the split, said it "represented an increasing lot-split syndrome on agricultural land, and none of this is agricultural preserve. Once lot splitting starts, it's only a matter of time before the whole area is pressured into lot splits."

But Commissioner Robert G. Lilley argued, "We got this applicant into this position. In fact, it is five-acre zoning."

"We're telling people who come in with what should be a routine lot split that, we're sorry, we've changed the basis of our consideration," Lilley said. "We're arguing the philosophy, but should be concerned about the people."

But Nielsen moved to deny Duncan's request for several reasons:

The lot pattern and road design is based on larger lots, he observed, noting there would be no direct access to Casey Ave. from the rear lot.

The lot split would be growth-inducing, increasing the density of the area, she said. It would be the beginning of cutting up the Santa Ynez Valley, she argued.

The Board of Supervisors recommended that the commission deny or continue lot splits until the agricultural study is completed.

The lot split was denied by a 5-4 vote of the commission.

In a different action, Paul Sevoian's request to split his 38-acre parcel near Lompoc into two lots was denied by another 5-4 vote.

Opposition to Sevoian's request was based largely on water. The County Health Dept. was concerned that an adequate water supply for the property would be lacking.

Sevoian said he was willing to go along with the Health Dept.'s conditions, but he didn't want to begin the expensive

Rocky's taxes hit

STORRS, Conn. (UPI) — Democratic presidential hopeful Fred Harris says Vice President Nelson Rockefeller should have been sued for non-support of his country in 1971, when the millionaire paid little or no federal income taxes.

"Americans need a graduated income tax rather than the present graduated loophole tax structure," Harris told students at the University of Connecticut Wednesday.

"He should have been sued for non-support," Harris said.

Should President Ford continue to appear in public crowds and risk assassination attempts?

This question was asked Tuesday in Williams Brothers' Shopping Center on West Ocean Avenue by the Record's roving reporter. Each week he appears in a different location with a new question.

WILLIAM REID, W. Cherry Ave.: Yes, I think so. I think he should be more careful where he goes, but he should appear in public. I don't think he should go in hiding just to please a few

L. MUNDEL, W. North Ave.: I think he should stay in Washington. The third time it may be a man who knows how to handle a gun.

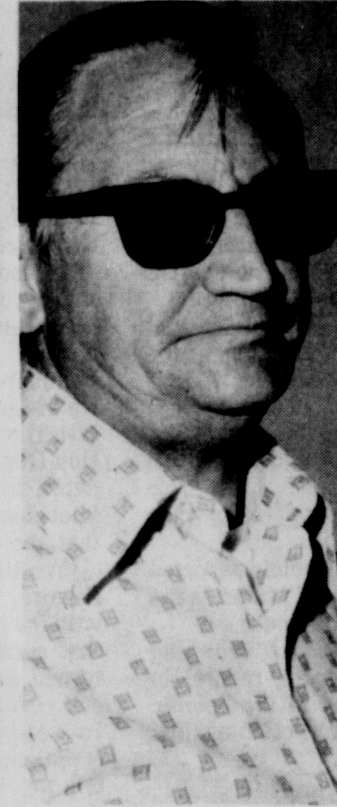

ALYCE LINDSEY, W. Walnut Ave.: All I can say is all the other presidents did and why shouldn't he?

EUGENE QUICK, North X St.: He seems to have plenty of help to keep him from getting killed, so I don't see why not. They seem to be doing a good job.

DAVE BOCKOCK, Cypress Ave.: Not really. Especially if he is going to be walking. He should go in a car. He would be safer.

DON RATHBUN, Willow Ave.: Yes. As a public figure to go into hiding, he would be saying he lacked faith in our ability to protect him — the law enforcement agencies.

Report vehicle mishaps to CHP or local police, official says

The public should report vehicular accidents to the California Highway Patrol or city police departments, Raymond D. Johnson, County Administrative Officer, advised today. Reports to other county agencies must be relayed to the patrol or police, and in some cases this could result in delays, he said.

Johnson issued this advisory after conferring with representatives of the Highway Patrol and the County Fire Department.

For accidents in the unincorporated areas calls should be made to the nearest CHP office in the day time or by using the Patrol's emergency number, he said.

Any phone operator will connect a caller with the Highway Patrol Emergency operator when a request is made for Zenith 12000, Johnson advised.

The telephone numbers for the Patrol's district offices are:

Moore 'glad' shot missed Ford

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sara Jane Moore says she took a shot at President Ford because it was easy to do and she felt isolated, desperately needing somebody to take her seriously. But she is glad she did not hit him.

"I'm glad he didn't die," Mrs. Moore said in her only interview since her arrest Monday on charges of attempting to assassinate the President. She hoped all along that she would be stopped, she said.

Mrs. Moore talked in the San Francisco County Jail with Elan Hume, a Los Angeles Times reporter who had talked with her many times during the past six months in connection with a series on radicals.

She talked in "confused fragments," according to the story in the Times today. The interview is laced with contradictions, factual errors and non sequiturs. Mrs. Moore said her motives were complicated.

"I feel perfectly fine, but I'm obviously distraught," she said.

Mrs. Moore had infiltrated radical groups for the FBI, and then publicly denounced herself as an informant, saying she had been converted to their beliefs.

She told the Times she felt "isolated" because radicals refused to accept her after she revealed she had been a spy. Reporters treated her as "flaky," she said. She continued to feed information to the FBI, however, even as she publicly decry her past role.

(The FBI has conceded she was supplying "unsolicited information" for expense money right up to the time she was arrested.)

She wanted to "do something to break off the insidious relationship with the FBI," she said. She felt "rage and frustration ... people are driven to act."

"I knew I was rapidly reaching a point that ... all of the avenues of taking action were being closed, one at a time ... It was a kind of an ultimate protest against the system. I did not want to kill anybody but there comes a time when the only way you can make a statement is to pick up a gun."

She tried only hours before the shooting to call friends, the Times said, "but all were too busy ... Before Monday, few had taken her seriously as a radical revolutionary."

Before the shooting, "I expected all the way ... to be picked up," she said. "I did want to be prevented ... I had set a course for myself that I hoped I would not be permitted to do."

"I am not a berserk woman," she said at one point, but later said she "was afraid of myself, that I would come apart ... afraid I would go around shooting people."

Shooting at the President was "like target practice ... like an invitation," she said. "The security was so stupid," she said, and she went through with her plan, despite her inner conflicts, just because it was so easy.

"It was as if I were on the outside watching me act, and everything was falling in place like a script."

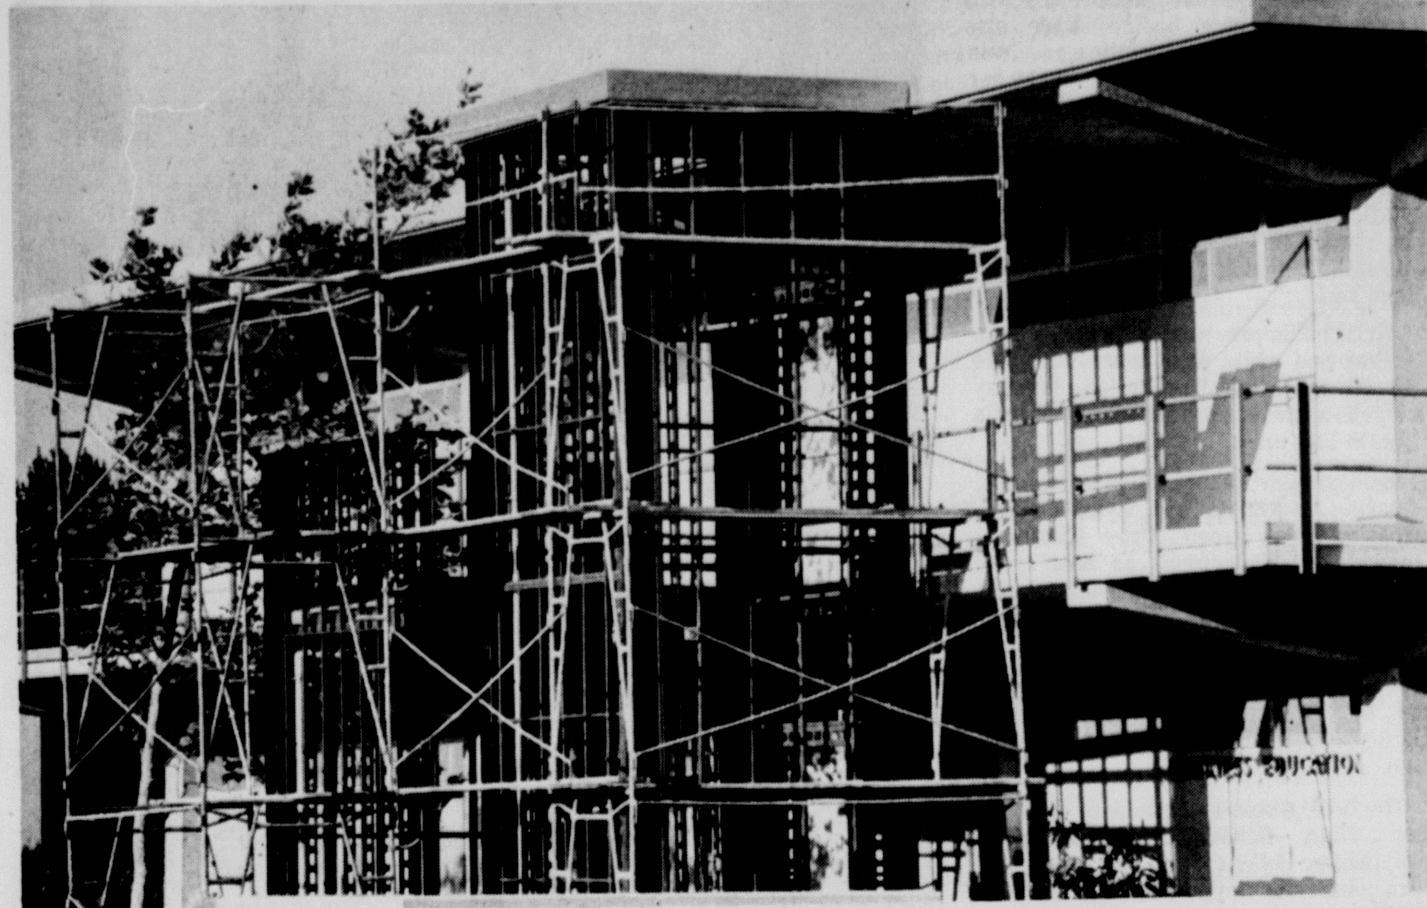

She said the arrest of Patricia Hearst "made a tremendous impact on me" but she rejected comparison with Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, calling her "insane ... She made me mad firing into the air ... seeking all that attention."

(The pistol Miss Fromme allegedly pointed at Ford in Sacramento two weeks earlier did not fire.)

She said she never really meant to shoot Ford and was glad she did not, but then complained she had to rush her shot because of pushing in the crowd and had "wanted to be able to brace my arm across someone's shoulder to steady it."

She said she hoped her action would somehow "forge some kind of unity" in the radical movement and make radicals "face the realities of some of the things they put in motion."

FUNDS by local and state Departments of Rehabilitation to remove architectural barriers for the handicapped and disabled students at Allan Hancock College resulted in the construction of an elevator at the college's two-story business education building. The elevator will assist physically disadvantaged students whose classes are held on the upper floor of the building. It is expected to become operational late this fall. Cost of the project is $57,060. Cost to the district is $18,020. The Department of Rehabilitation has contributed $39,440. An opportunity to find out about services available for the disabled and handicapped students is offered today at an open house Sept. 25 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the college student center (Santa Maria campus.)

Firms causing shortage by holding back gas — Moss

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., contended today the biggest reason for the severe natural gas shortage is that companies are holding back gas from interstate sale, waiting for higher prices.

"The current shortage of natural gas is not, as some contend, the inevitable result of federal regulation," Moss told the House Subcommittee on Energy and Power. "It is rather the result of two factors: the failure of Congress to extend (price) regulation to the intrastate market and, more importantly, the result of industry speculation concerning future increases in the price of natural gas."

Moss said an investigation by a subcommittee he heads turned up substantial evidence of "speculative withholding" of natural gas. Prices in interstate sales are limited by the Federal Power Commission to 52 cents per thousand cubic feet. Prices of gas sold intrastate—that is, within the same state as production—are free of controls and often are two to three times the level of controlled prices.

"As a result of the growing gap between intrastate prices and the FPC regulated price, since 1971 almost all new gas supplies produced onshore have been consumed in the producing state," Moss said.

Industry spokesmen — including several who also testified before the energy subcommittee—agree with that, but contend the solution is to free prices on interstate sales. The incentive of higher prices, they contend, will bring new exploration and production of gas.

Moss said the gas is already there:

"Evidence of speculative withholding of natural gas has been incorporated into the record of various proceedings before the FPC," he said. For example, he said, one 1973 witness for an oil company was asked what he would do if he could not get special permission to sell interstate at a higher price.

"He replied that he would sell to the unregulated intrastate market or not market the gas at all," Moss said. He quoted the man as saying, "Uncommitted gas reserves now are apparently among the finest assets that a company can have."

The solution, Moss contended, is for Congress to signal the oil and gas companies "that regulation is here to stay," and indeed may extend even to intrastate sales of gas.

Groups warn of impact of Concorde

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An environmental group says the Concorde supersonic transport is intolerably noisy, air-polluting and dangerous and should be banned from U.S. airports.

In a petition to the Civil Aeronautics Board Wednesday the Environmental Defense Fund said scientists have concluded that use of the Concorde on North Atlantic routes "would deplete the stratospheric ozone shield, which filters out ultra-violet radiation from the sun, and would thus increase the incidence of skin cancer in human beings."

The National Academy of Sciences said regular flights by only 16 Concordes "might lead in the long run to several thousand additional cases of skin cancer per year in the world, of which perhaps a thousand would be in the United States," according to the environmentalists' petition.

An attorney for the fund, John Hellegers, said the plane "is at least twice as noisy as present jets, and emits two-and-a-half times the carbon monoxide." The EDF is a coalition claiming more than 55,000 members, including scientists, lawyers and others.

Ford met with Rep. George Mahon, D-Tex., Sen. Carl Curtis, R-Neb., and farmers Ray Davis of Potter, Neb., and Wilmer Smith of New Home, Tex.

Curtis said at a news conference later the group told Ford "that he was in trouble (with farmers) over his export policy."

Davis and Smith told the President of the more than 1,000 calls from farmers on the ACA hotline on the two preceding Wednesday evenings. Only 20 of the calls backed Ford's policy.

Grain sales to Russia were stopped after the Soviet Union had contracted for 10 million tons of American grain. Ford later extended the moratorium into October, saying further sales this year would have to await negotiation of a long-term deal.

Ford irks farmers over exports

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Since President Ford restricted grain sales to Russia the price of soybeans has dropped $1 a bushel and the President has been told he is in trouble with farmers, according to farm state leaders.

State radical 'combat zone,' Reagan says

ATLANTA (UPI) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan said Wednesday that "zany radicals and urban guerrillas" have picked California as a "combat zone" in their war against established order.

The recent assassination attempts upon President Ford, he said, should not be a reflection on the people of California.

But Reagan said he still opposes gun control, which he believes would keep ordinary citizens from arming themselves against criminals.

"Let's increase the penalty for carrying a gun illegally," he said, "and add five to 15 years to the sentences of people convicted of committing a crime with a gun."

Reagan, a possible candidate for the Republican nomination for President, said security forces should be authorized to decide what precautions are needed and when a particular appearance is not safe for an official or candidate.

"The decision should be taken off the shoulders of any one individual," he said at an airport news conference.

farmer from near Wilmet, Ark., says beans were selling for $6.20 a bushel before the administration imposed a moratorium on sales in August.

The barrier to sales was extended into October and broadened to cover Poland and now soybeans are bringing only $5.20 a bushel, Currie told fellow farmers in the Agriculture Council of America Wednesday night.

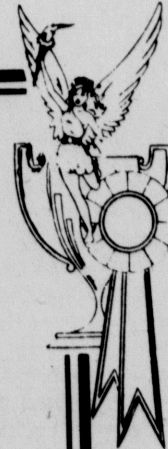

Since Arkansas farmers will produce about 102.3 million bushels of soybeans this year, Currie said this means the administration's delay in approving additional Soviet and Polish grain sales has taken $102.3 million out of their pockets.

"Ford has broken his promises to the American farmer," added Furman Walker a farmer from near Cedar Rapids, Iowa, in another call on the ACA telephone hotline for farmers. Protests from Currie, Walker and several hundred other farmers kept the ACA hotline phones busy.

Earlier Wednesday members of Congress and two farmers warned President Ford in a visit that he is in trouble with farmers because of the export restraints, imposed to allow time to explore possibilities for a long term grain deal with Russia and an October 11 estimate of U.S. grain production.

Curry-Kaehn nuptials are held

Oregon church is the wedding scene

McKenzie River United Presbyterian Church was setting for the wedding of Claudia Lynn Curry and Lawrence Lloyd Kaehn. White gladioli with pink and lavender asters decorated the altar for the 3 p.m. ceremony performed by the Rev. Milton Gardiner. Mrs. Paul Magney was organist and an alto saxophone solo was played by Mark Curry, brother of the bride.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. Dale M. Curry of Springfield, Oregon. The bridegroom is the son of Peter Kaehn, 206 South C Street, and the late Mrs. Kaehn. His grandmother is Mrs. Kenneth Long, the former Esther Hollister. An aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Godet of Lompoc-Casmalia Road, were wedding guests.

The bride wore an empire style gown of white quiana accented with embroidered lace bodice. Lace also trimmed the sleeves, hemline and train of her gown which was fashioned by her grandmother, Mrs. Albert Collins. She wore a diamond and emerald pendant, gift from her maternal grandparents, and carried a bouquet of straw flowers, statice, baby's breath and moss accented by sprigs of wheat. A halo of similar flowers framed her face and secured her lace veil.

Kristine Snipes, maid of honor, wore a yellow and white print gown with halo wreath in her hair. She carried a nosegay of yellow straw flowers, statice, baby's breath and moss.

Bridesmaids were Debbie Schmidt, wearing lavender, and Lynn Hassel, wearing mint green. Dave Clark attended the bridegroom as best man. Ushers were Pat Harkins, Dick Beathe and Mark Curry who also lighted the candles with Carol Bartholomew.

A reception planned for the home garden of her parents, was held at the Springfield Jr. High School because of rain.

The bridegroom is a graduate of Lompoc High School and California Polytechnic College, San Luis Obispo. He then joined the United States Army and served in Korea. Presently he is employed as a coordinator for the aged in Albany, Oregon.

Cooking talents

By BETTY LAURENT

Two main dishes and desserts are published today as contributions to my sister-employees at the Lompoc Record. From Lorie (Mrs. Jerry) Wertman, proof reader, comes the first. The basic recipe came from a friend, Mrs. Mike Matsumoto, and was changed somewhat by personal preferences.

Chicken-Broccoli Casserole

4 chicken breasts
1 bunch fresh broccoli
2 pieces bread, toasted and cubed
1/4 cup chopped onions
1 can condensed cream of chicken soup
1/4-1/2 cup milk, depending on creaminess desired.
1 chicken bouillon cube
1 cup grated cheddar cheese
soy sauce, salt and pepper to taste
Cook chicken, then cube meat. Cook broccoli but don't overcook. In a casserole dish, put half the broccoli, layer with chicken, top with remaining broccoli. Sprinkle bread cubes over top.

In a medium sized saucepan over low heat, stir together the soup, onion, milk and bouillon cube until cube dissolves. Add soy sauce, salt and pepper to taste. Pour mixture over casserole ingredients and top with the grated cheese. Place in 350 degree oven for 30 minutes or until hot and bubbly.

From Fay (Mrs. James H.) Van De Putte Jr. of the composing room comes her recipe for a favorite.

Sweet-Sour Beef Stew

1 1/2 lbs. beef stew meat cut in inch cubes
2 tbsp. cooking oil
1 cup chopped carrots
1 cup sliced onion
1 8 oz. can tomato sauce (1 cup)
1/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup vinegar
1 tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
4 tsp. cornstarch
hot cooked noodles
poppy seeds (optional)
Brown meat in oil. Add next six ingredients, 1/2 cup water and 1 tsp. salt. Cover and cook over low heat until meat is tender, about two hours. Combine cornstarch and 1/4 cup cold water, add to beef mixture. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly. Serve over noodles sprinkled with poppy seeds. Garnish with carrot curls and parsley if desired.
Today's dessert recipes are provided by Daphne Lynch also of the Record's composing department.

Cocoa Cinnamon Pound Cake

1 cup margarine
2 1/2 cups sugar
5 eggs

3 cups sifted all purpose flour

1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 cup cocoa
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 cup milk
1 tsp. vanilla

Cream butter until light and fluffy; add sugar, creaming well, then eggs one at a time beating after each addition. Sift flour, salt, baking powder, cocoa and cinnamon together and add dry ingredients alternately with milk to creamed mixture. Add vanilla. Pour batter into greased and floured 10-inch tube pan. Bake in pre-heated oven 325 degrees for 1 1/2 hours. Cool 15 minutes, then remove from pan.

Short Crust Pastry

6 tbsp. lard, chilled and cut into small pieces
2 tbsp. margarine, chilled and cut into small pieces
1 1/2 cups all purpose flour
1/4 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sugar
3-4 tbsp. ice water

In large bowl mix butter, lard, flour, salt and sugar. Rub together with fingers until it looks like coarse meal. Pat 3 tbsp. ice water over mixture and toss together lightly; gather into ball. If dough crumbles add additional 1 tbsp. water. Wrap in wax paper and chill for at least an hour before rolling out to use. This pastry is used for the following recipe and for any pie.

Maids of Honor

2 tbsp. butter, softened
5 tbsp. flour
short crust pastry
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup ground almonds
1 tbsp. grated lemon peel
2 tbsp. cream
Preheat oven to 400 degrees; grease and flour muffin tins (approximately 18). Roll out pastry and cut about 1/4 inch thick in three-inch rounds. Fit into muffin tins.
Beat egg yolks together with sugar, almonds, lemon peel and remaining tbsp. flour. Slowly add cream and beat. Place about 1 tbsp. of mixture in each pastry shell.

Optional: Lightly spread raspberry jam on pastry before adding almond mixture. Bake 15-20 minutes until filling is a light golden brown.

Suggestion: Another raspberry flavored dessert is a rice ala mode made by folding whipped cream and crushed almonds into prepared rice pudding, then layering with raspberries slightly sweetened, or with raspberry jam.

Dear Abby

Reader with green thumb advised not to grow 'grass'

My daughter came home from a date and saw Manny "spending the night" with me. She ran crying to her room and locked herself in. A few days later, she told me she "hated" Manny, and she's been very cool and distant to me ever since.

Did she expect me to be loyal to her father forever?

Abby, I am 39 and only human. Should I break up with Manny just to make my daughter happy?

ONLY HUMAN
DEAR ONLY: Admittedly, we are all only human, but when a daughter discovers her mother's feet of clay, mother usually winds up as "mud." I doubt if breaking up with Manny will make your daughter "happy." In time, she may understand that mothers have needs, too, but your lack of discretion netted you (and Manny) some well-deserved criticism.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed SEEN IT ALL complained about a 68-year-old neighbor lady who displayed her uncovered rear end to the entire neighborhood while planting pansies.

Your reply was too mild. I would have told the offended neighbor to take a good, clear color photo of the pansy planter using a zoom lens, have it enlarged, and send it to her with the following note: "A guest took this while HE was visiting us."

WICHITA, KANSAS
DEAR WICH: You topped me. That should be the end of it.

DEAR ABBY: I love to grow plants. About a year ago, someone gave me some marijuana seeds, and I planted them. Well, they thrived and are really beautiful.

I have never smoked marijuana, and I don't plan to. I know it's against the law to grow it, but would like to know what the fine would be if I were caught.

Please answer in your column for obvious reasons.

NO NAME IN CALIF.
DEAR NO NAME: Arthur Groman, a top-notch California attorney, says that you would be charged with "possessing marijuana," and the penalty would vary, depending upon the quantity of marijuana found in your possession.

He suggests you destroy the marijuana and plant geraniums. And if you're wise, you'll take your cue about what to grow from Groman.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been dead for six years. We had a wonderful marriage in every way. Our daughter, now 16, misses her father almost as much as I do. She and I have always had a very close and loving relationship.

About six months ago, I met Manny and we were attracted to each other immediately. He was at my home for dinner one night last week. One thing led to another, and he ended up spending the night in my bedroom.

Rich Californians to pay more taxes

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — About 6,000 of the wealthiest Californians will pay an extra $25 million in state taxes next year as the result of legislation signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.

It means the end of a law reportedly used by Ronald Reagan to avoid state income taxes for 1970.

And, it means all of Brown's four-point package to end "special tax privileges for the few" has been signed into law or will be on the ballot for voters.

The bill takes effect next year and ends the "gentleman farmer" tax shelter, which permits the rich to invest in agriculture and deduct farm losses against other income.

It was this provision that gave former Gov. Reagan his tax break, said the author of the measure (AB1209), Assemblyman Daniel Boatwright, D-Concord.

The legislation also limits the advantage given to "preference income," such things as certain capital gains and stock options, which is now taxed at a much lower rate than wages and common income.

Acting on some 600 bills passed during the final week of the legislative session, Brown also: —Signed measures putting $375 million in bond issues on the June 1976 election ballot — a unique $200 million proposal for schools and a $175 million measure for clean drinking water.

—Approved a bill outlawing spanking in public schools next year without written permission from parents in advance, a measure (AB1267) authored by Assemblywoman Leona Egelandy, D-San Jose.

—Signed legislation (AB1436) by Assemblyman Art Torres, D-Los Angeles, making men liable for the same prostitution penalties as women beginning Jan. 1.

—Vetoed a Democratic-sponsored proposal to require legislative confirmation of gubernatorial appointees for vacancies in the office of lieutenant governor and other high statewide officials.

Brown said the present system of filling vacancies "has worked well over a century. Why change it?"

Democratic Assemblyman Bill Lockyer of San Leandro offered the bill (AB253) after lame-duck Reagan filled a vacancy in the office of lieutenant governor with a GOP candidate for the post, state Sen. John Harmer, R-Glendale.

The school bond act (AB32), if approved, will be the only second time in recent history that schools will be able to get construction money by a majority vote rather than the difficult two-thirds margin now required.

Presently only earthquake improvement bonds can be approved by a majority vote. All other school bonds now are subject to a two-thirds vote of the public.

Educators complain that two-thirds approval at the polls is harder to win each year.

The new bonds would be limited specifically to modernizing school facilities — such as classrooms, gyms, and libraries — built before 1947.

'Squeaky' to get jail privileges

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Manson cultist Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme will be given extra jail privileges so she can prepare her defense against the charge she attempted to assassinate President Ford, officials said Wednesday.

Messy Fromme, 26, was granted permission by U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride Tuesday to act as her own defense attorney.

He refused to order special jail privileges for her, but said he had no objections to any arrangement she could make with county officials who operate the jail where she is held in lieu of $350,000 bail.

A spokesman for Sheriff Duane Lowe said officials had granted several requests made by Miss Fromme, including a desk and chair for her isolation cell and an extra hour of visiting time each Thursday to consult with co-counsel E. Richard Walker, a federal public defender, and potential witnesses.

However, Lowe refused requests for a radio and a typewriter, the spokesman said. She said Miss Fromme will be allowed to write only one two-page personal letter a day, as other prisoners, but will be allowed unlimited legal correspondence.

Beaches swarmed in heat wave

Thousands of persons swarmed to California beaches Wednesday to escape temperatures that climbed to more than 100 degrees, but in the Northeast, rains continued to produce the threat of floods.

Los Angeles recorded a high of 102 and Long Beach, Calif., had an unconfirmed high of 105. An estimated 250,000 persons crowded Los Angeles area beaches even though it was a workday and children were in school.

The combination of big crowds and "sand-buster" surf kept lifeguards busy making more than 200 rescues, Los Angeles County officials said. Authorities also said five California brush fires that burned through 35,000 acres of land were brought under control. However, a sixth fire continued to burn out of control Wednesday and already has consumed 10,000 acres of land and caused an estimated $10 million in damages.

The flood threat continued in the Northeast early today as heavy rains moved into the middle Atlantic states and southern New England. The storm system was associated with the remnants of Hurricane Eloise.

The heavy rains brought more flash flood watches in Rhode Island, Connecticut, Massachusetts, southern and western New York, New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

In a six-hour period ending early today, more than an inch of rain fell at Charlottesville, Va., Rocky Mount, N.C., Chicapec Falls, Maine, and Harrisburg, Pa.

Lake shore warnings were issued for western Lake Erie because of strong winds circulating around the Northeast storm system.

Hiss attacks Nixon

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alger Hiss, a convicted perjurer and the central figure in one of the most sensational Cold War spy trials, says the "evil" of the McCarthy era began with Richard Nixon.

Hiss told the New York Criminal and Civil Courts Bar Association Wednesday the McCarthy era "was an evil period — and (Joseph) McCarthy was an evil man. It all began with Nixon."

He said McCarthy's anti-Communist campaign began two weeks after his conviction.

Panel asks for planes in roundup

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Citizen advisers to the federal Bureau of Land Management have called for use of airplanes and other mechanized equipment in rounding up wild horses and burros in California and northwestern Nevada.

Current law forbids use of any motorized equipment to manage the free-roaming mustangs and donkeys, whose numbers are multiplying at the rate of 25 per cent a year.

The bureau's 12-member advisory board, which advises the agency on multiple uses of federal lands in California and northern Nevada, made the recommendation Wednesday after a three-day field trip.

Wild horse populations in the bureau's Susanville district have soared from 1,800 to 4,100 in the past two years, the bureau said, an increase of 25 per cent.

The board also urged adoption of federal legislation to transfer the title for wild horses and burros to private citizens. The law now allows the transfer of such animals to individuals but they remain the property of the federal government.

Legislature to stay in old chambers

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Plans are running behind schedule and it appears sure the legislature will be meeting in its old Capitol chambers at the start of next year, after all.

Because of earthquake danger, the Capitol is being given a $42 million restoration and lawmakers moved out of the 106-year-old West Wing chambers at the end of their session this month to make way for workmen.

The plan was to reconvene next year's session in $600,000 temporary buildings on the Capitol grounds.

But Assembly Executive Officer Frederick Taugher confirmed today that the temporary buildings "almost certainly" cannot be ready by the Jan. 5 bang of the gavel. So the Senate and Assembly will start the year in the old chambers and move out when the temporary facilities are ready, he said.

That could be the end of January, Taugher added, or lawmakers might decide not to rush things and put off the move until a week long Easter recess in April.

It is only the West Wing that is being renovated, including the Senate and Assembly chambers, the dome and rotunda, and the Treasurer's office.

Not included are the offices for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s office, the state controller or the 120 legislators and their staffs, or the Capitol committee rooms. They are located in the new, and sturdier, East Wing, which is not being restored.

New law may slow cutbacks at prisons

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Personnel cutbacks planned at state prisons may be slowed because of a new law requiring mandatory prison sentences for persons convicted of using guns during serious crimes.

Phil Guthrie, a spokesman for the Department of Corrections, Wednesday said a projected 3,000 inmate population drop for this fiscal year was expected to cause a reduction in staff at the state's 12 prisons. But he said the measure (SB278) signed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. Tuesday could change the situation.

"This will cause an adjustment in our prison intake and therefore the number of jobs eliminated," he said of the bill by Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach.

The measure eliminates the discretion of judges to grant probation for persons convicted of using a gun during a murder, robbery, rape, kidnapping, first-degree burglary, prison escapes and assault.

Guthrie said the reduction in personnel at the prisons will be done through attrition and "no layoffs are planned." He said periodic fluctuations in the prison population often force personnel cuts.

"We have enough turnover that no one has to worry about losing their jobs," he said, adding that job reductions will affect all classifications.

Guthrie said the drop in the prison population is due in part to the "cautiousness" by the Adult Authority during the last few years. He said many prisoners who could have been replaced were not, and will now be paroled under a new system initiated in March.

MOVING EXPENSE TAX DEDUCTIONS

Prior to 1970, your moving expense tax deduction was limited to the cost of transporting your household goods and family transportation costs (including meals and lodging).

Now, in addition to these costs, you can also deduct travel expenses for pre-move house-hunting trips. Also deductible now, are temporary living expenses (up to 30 days) at the new job location. In addition, expenses such as real estate commissions, mortgage costs, and similar items incurred in buying or selling your home, or settling a lease are now deductible.

The maximum deduction for these newly added categories is $2,500. No more than $1,000 of this can be for house-hunting and temporary living expenses.

These benefits now apply to the self-employed as well as to employees. To qualify for these deductions, your new job site must be at least 50 miles away. The old requirement was 20 miles.

State keeping eye on scales

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—The state is intensifying efforts to prevent California consumers from being short-weighted when they buy meat, potatoes and other commodities.

State Food and Agriculture Director Luther T. Wallace said he has ordered an increase in enforcement of weights and measures accuracy requirements plus a change of emphasis in the method of enforcement.

The efforts are designed to protect consumers against systematic short-weighting—giving consumers less than the quantity of the commodity they paid for.

"We are accelerating enforcement through issuance of increased citations and making the violations public through the news media," he said.

"We are issuing more citations and we are getting more fines. And we are getting a higher rate of compliance."

The Food and Agriculture Department's Division of Measurement Standards and the county sealers of weights and measures work to insure the accuracy of weight, measure and count of commodities sold in the state.

Wallace said the more aggressive enforcement policy includes use of undercover inspectors, men and women who pose as consumers and purchase commodities on a spot check basis and in response to complaints of short-weighting throughout the state. The items are then checked for accuracy.

The director also has called for a change of emphasis in enforcement methods away from checking the accuracy of weight scales. He wants more emphasis placed on checking products after they are purchased. Also, a wider variety of products will be inspected.

Inspectors who find that their purchases were inaccurate then can have merchant's scales examined for accuracy, said Wallace, named director by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. on Feb. 3.

Around the world canoe trip set

HOUSTON (UPI)—Stephen Jenkevics, a self-styled promoter, believes everyone should follow their dreams and not just talk about them.

So when David Wilson told him he had dreamed of canoeing around the world for the last 28 years, Jenkevics quickly asked why he hadn't.

"He said he had never found another nut to go along," Jenkevics said, "but I knew someone just as crazy and introduced them."

Enter Curt Kinkead.

"I was going to be the promoter and raise the money for them, but as I worked more and more on it, I decided I wanted to go, too," Jenkevics said.

He said Wilson's goal has become the goal of all three men.

"The trip may take five years, or seven or whatever, but that's not important," Jenkevics said. "We're making the trip for a lot of reasons, but more than anything else, just to see what's around the next bend."

A two-man canoe-kayak combination called a Folbot was converted to a three-seater and the three men from Los Angeles began the first leg of their 57,000-mile journey.

Jenkevics, 34, Wilson, 38, a chef, and Kinkead, 33, a pharmaceutical salesman, left the Portofino Inn in Redondo Beach, Calif., and paddled 40 miles before loading the 17½-foot canoe on a trailer donated by U-Haul and heading for the Gulf Coast.

The second and most important leg of their trip began Wednesday at the Watergate Inn on Clear Lake near the Johnson Space Center. A fourth member of the team, Ron du Vernet, will follow the canoers in a truck and they will put ashore each evening and camp whenever possible.

The next stop is Montreal, by way of intracoastal waterways, 7,500 miles of paddling ahead. They also hope to break the world record set in 1937—7,155 miles.

"We're going to reach Montreal July 4, the bicentennial," Jenkevics said. "Our birthday present to our nation will be a world's record."

From Montreal they will hitch a ride on a steamer to Scotland, work their way across Europe and Asia and cross the Aleutians to Alaska.

Jenkevics and his friends think the trip will cost them about $5,000 a year for food.

"We're going to live off the land, so to speak," he said. "Hopefully, people won't let us starve or go without shelter."

"Everyone we've met so far has been unbelievably nice. They all have their dreams and through us can live them. Everyone at some time has wanted to tell their boss what he can do with his job and take off. We're doing it."

New farming operation — lobsters

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Pacific marine farms which can produce eastern lobster at a cost of $2 a pound may be only two years away, according to a researcher at one of three coastal lobster laboratories.

"Just this week the representatives of three giant international corporations have been here to see our operation," said Jon C. Van Olst, a San Diego State University research associate.

"All of them are very interested in the lobster culture potential, and I think there is a very good chance that one or more of them will elect to make the necessary investment," he said. "A commercial operation could be under way within two years."

Van Olst is conducting research at the University of California's Scripps Institution of Oceanography, where he is lobster hatchery manager.

The experiment started four years ago with six female eastern lobsters, the ancestors of an estimated 3,500 now thriving at the three Pacific farms.

Van Olst estimated there were 1,500 lobsters ranging from tiny to dinner size in a series of large tanks through which sea water was being pumped at Scripps.

Thirteen miles up the coastline another 500 were growing in the thermal effluent from the San Diego Gas & Electric Co. Encina Power Plant. The third laboratory, at Southern California Edison's electric station at Redondo Beach, had another 1,500 lobsters.

Van Olst estimated that a four-acre Pacific water farm could produce about one million lobsters a year.

He said it takes four pounds of a new lobster chow to produce a one-pound animal, compared with five to six pounds of other known foods. The new feed costs 24 cents a pound.

That price put the feed cost of raising a lobster to market weight at about $1, and Van Olst said labor and other expenses raises the total cost to about $2 for a one-pound animal. The fish market price for a one-pound eastern lobster is between $3.50 and $4, he said.

The new feed was developed from shrimp chow blended with pelagic red crab from Baja California. The crab gives the lobsters an attractive red color, and the blend reduces laboratory costs.

Other significant developments within the past year include:

— The occurrence and control of a deadly bacterial disease that attacked species on both U.S. coasts.

— The identification of a genetically blind subspecies of lobster that grows three to five times faster than normal.

— And refinement of a revolving, wheel-like lobster habitat called the "care-o-cell." Lobsters are suspended in the wheel's individual cages to thwart their cannibalistic habits.

Van Olst said turning the habitat facilitated the distribution of oxygen, water and food and the removal of waste. The habitats in operation range up to 10 feet in diameter, but Van Olst envisioned wheels up to 100 feet in diameter with room for 8,000 lobsters.

The blind lobster subspecies was discovered at a National Marine Fisheries Service laboratory in Massachusetts. Five months ago the variety was found in a colony here, and efforts to establish a blind lobster population are under way, Van Olst said.

"These animals are genetically blind," he said. "In fact, they have no eye stalks. The prevailing theory of their rapid growth is that the glands that control molting and growth are found in the eye stalks and so, lacking these glands, their growth proceeds unchecked."

Lobsters grow only by molting, and the molting rate increases as water temperatures go up. In the ocean off New England, where winter water temperatures drop to 34 degrees, molting occurs twice a year and lobsters grow to one pound in eight years.

The water temperature here ranges from 55 degrees in the winter to 70 in the summer, and the eastern lobster grown here reach one pound in about three years, Van Olst said.

At the power plant laboratories, where the habitat water is held at a constant 75 degrees, the lobsters reach one pound in about two years, he said.

New funeral regulations asked

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — A funeral can cost you as much as a new car, but it's a lot harder to "kick the tires" at the mortuary to see what you're getting.

Handicaps you start with can include your own grief, subtle funeral parlor salesmanship, package deals, prepayment plans and a lack of price advertising.

The Federal Trade Commission says the average American spends $2,000 for funeral services and burial. Researchers say he may be at his intellectual worst when he signs a funeral contract.

"Price data and information on alternatives to traditional funerals are hard to come by," according to consumer information researcher Margaret Philpott.

"If you don't know how much a funeral costs now, imagine your situation when you have to make decisions under pressures of grief, stress and time," she said after coordinating research on funerals and burials for California Public Interest Research Group Inc.

The FTC recently proposed rules to prohibit the funeral home industry from taking advantage of customers' grief and vulnerability, but it was expected that it would be at least a year before the rules are instituted, and opposition is expected from the industry.

"People make funeral arrangements with little or no knowledge of what they're dealing with," she said. "Because of grief-induced disorientation, they may be unable to exercise normal business judgment. They can be victimized easily."

Ms. Philpott's answer is five pages of "Facts Worth Knowing About Funerals," which she wrote to go with her report for the student-financed research group.

"The standard funeral has three parts," she said. "One is professional services, which include embalming, cosmetology, viewing, a chapel service, use of a hearse, etc. The cost spread here was $458 to $695."

"The services package doesn't include the other parts, the casket and cemetery package."

She explained that the cemetery cost covers the plot, the grave liner — which keeps the earth over the coffin from sagging — the digging and closing of the grave and perpetual care. Minimum prices here ranged from $358 to $835.

"Caskets represent the major price variable," Ms. Philpott said. "They can be made of compressed cardboard, polished wood, aluminum or even copper and bronze. Airtight lids and such extras as innerspring mattresses can run the price into the thousands of dollars, while the cheapest run about $45."

For maximum economy, Ms. Philpott suggested direct cremation with arrangements through a cremation society. The total fee here, about $250, covers all phases from picking up the remains to scattering of ashes.

Ms. Philpott emphasized that cremation handled through a mortuary can cost much more, and she said a recurring problem involved the sale of extras such as display cases and crypts for "cremains," that is, ashes.

"Looking to other areas of economy, it may be possible to reduce the cost of professional services by not accepting the entire package," she said. "Consumers should ask if they can accept only the services they actually need."

"For example, the consumer's own church or synagogue could be used in place of a mortuary chapel, and embalming and cosmetology can be dispensed with for a closed-casket service."

Memorial society membership can save money. The nonprofit society here charges a $10 membership fee and contracts with mortuaries to provide low-cost ($150), dignified funerals. "Cemetery costs aren't included, but the consumer stands to save substantially on the professional service aspect," Ms. Philpott said.

She recommended advance planning to be sure of getting the kind of funeral desired. A consumer should obtain information on services and products and leave instructions with relatives or a funeral home, she said.

"Some form of insurance might be obtained or money might be set aside in a savings account for the expenses," she said. A second approach is to contract in advance for a specific funeral, but Ms. Philpott said there are potential hazards.

"Part of the money paid for a prearranged funeral can be lost if the consumer moves and it's no longer practical to use the same funeral director, and the consumer can lose sight of the total paid over the years," she said.

Other problems she cited included contract clauses releasing mortuaries from trust obligations and trust agreements in which little interest is paid on the consumer's money. She recommends a savings account instead.

Her advice for dealing with funeral homes includes:

—Consider the economical alternatives to traditional funerals.

—Remember embalming is not required by law except when a body is shipped.

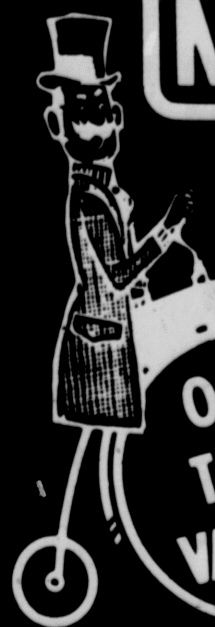

—Remember caskets are not required for cremation, that ashes may be disposed of in any way and that crypts are not required.

—And, do not sign any statements you do not understand.

Orioles stay alive; A's celebrate

United Press International
Wednesday night the Orioles refused to be stayed by the rain in their mission of overtaking the Boston Red Sox in the American League East pennant chase.
Amid scattered heavy rains, a delay of over three hours and a soaked field, the Orioles—behind ace right-hander Jim Palmer—walloped the Detroit Tigers 8-1 for their 10th win in the last 11 games and moved to within 3½ games of the rained-out Red Sox.
The Oakland A's, after three straight games of flirting with a magic number of one, clinched their fifth straight AL West title.
The A's pounded out 13 hits including Reggie Jackson's 33rd and 34th homers to drub the Chicago White Sox 13-2. Vida Blue, who pitched the first six innings, gained credit for his 21st win.

Palmer, now 22-11, spaced six hits in equaling his previous season-high victory total.

The A's celebrated for a change after locking up the title. The past two years, they acted as if nothing happened after clinching. Wednesday night, though, they acted like first time winners.

"We lost Catfish and everyone said we couldn't do it again," said Sal Bando. "So that added to the pressure. Personally, I'm more excited about winning this year than ever before."

Brewers 10, Indians 3
George Scott drove home four runs with a three-run homer and a double as the Brewers halted Indian southpaw Fritz Peterson's winning streak at 11. Scott's homer, his 34th, kept him even with Reggie Jackson for the AL lead and his three RBI moved him into a tie with Fred Lynn for second in that department with 104—one behind John Mayberry.

Royals 4, Twins 2
George Brett drove home three runs including the game-winner in the eighth inning for the Royals, lifting his RBI total to 89. Brett had a two-run triple in the third and then laced a run-scoring single to snap a 2-2 tie in the eighth.

But Conqs wary

DP in hole, yardage-wise

By KEN MURPHY
If past performances are anything to go by, you'd think Cabrillo's defense could take the week off from practice and send the third-stringers to Huyck Stadium tomorrow night to take care of the visiting Dos Pueblos Chargers. But football coaches know it's not that simple, and Cabrillo's Ed Knowles seems to have everything in perspective.
"They look rather weak offensively at this point," says Knowles, referring to the 9-0 defeat handed to the Chargers by Santa Monica High last Friday night. More noteworthy than the score was the fact that the whole DP offensive effort for the night was a total of minus four yards—four yards passing and minus eight rushing.
"They've always been a strong passing team," Knowles added, "but they haven't got the personnel for that this year, so they've gone to the wishbone offense."
Knowles rates the Charger backfield as small but quick. He believes the new DP offense has not jelled yet, and says he "wouldn't be surprised if they showed us something new and altogether different."

Defense is another story. With five returning starters, Charger coach Dick Mires stated before the season, rather matter-of-factly, "Defense will be our strength."

Knowles won't disagree with that. Back from last year's Channel League Championship team are three defenders in particular who might give the Conquistador offense some trouble. Senior Ralph Gallagher (5'5", 165) plays cornerback, and starts at halfback on offense. Linebacker Kevin Wolthausen (5'9", 179) and tackle Jim Mason (5'11", 192), both seniors, are the other returning starters. But the defense is neither big nor awesome.

Up on the hill at Cabrillo this week, the Conqs have been polishing up their act for Game No. 2.

"We need to improve on our execution," states Knowles, who watched his team fumble the ball away three times last Friday in the 10-10 tie at San Marcos. "It's a little early in the season to be trying anything too fancy, since we're still stressing fundamentals. So we hope to eliminate the errors."

The Conqs should be healthy for tomorrow's contest, emerging from the Royal game with no injuries save a couple of bruised ribs for Andre McGant, who has already recovered.

Don't expect Cabrillo to be taking the Chargers lightly. They've been beaten by DP two years straight. In addition, the Conqs are still seeking their first win of the season.

However, the Conq defense might be a little more anxious than anyone else to meet up with the Chargers. They probably noted that, along with DP's wrong-way yardage from the Santa Monica game, they also fumbled the ball seven times, and made just one first down. So it just might turn out that the best thing about Cabrillo's offense tomorrow night will be the defense.

Knowles won't be making any noticeable adjustments in style for the DP game, since he was pleased with his team's overall performance last week. He'll stay with the same starting lineup.

Conq lineup

OFFENSE: QB — Ray Dahlmann (6-1, 190), LH — Ron Carney (5-11, 175), RH — Andre McGant (6-0, 180), SE — Wayne Brown (5-11, 155), FL — Larry Riggie (5-8, 175), TE — Jim Dahlmann (6-3, 186), LT — Ron Harris (5-11, 196), LG — Greg Brackin (5-10, 173), C — Mark Bingle (5-8, 170), RG — Curt Rogers (5-10, 180), RT — Kevin Breshears (6-2, 220).

DEFENSE: LE — Darryl Dalcetri (5-10, 160), LT — Jim Filarsky (5-11, 195), N — Albert Reyes (5-10, 190), RT — Dave Eden (5-10, 193), RE — Mark Larson (5-10, 165), LLB — Mark Hall (5-10, 175), RLB — Mark Bowser (6-1, 194), LCB — Greg Holt (5-8, 156), RCB — Ken Clayton (5-8, 140), SS — Joe Culley (5-10, 165), WS — Tom Purvis (5-10, 159).

MAKING SURE this San Luis Obispo ballcarrier is good and down, Cabrillo defenders Greg Dalton (87) and Jim Filarsky (79) prepare to apply a coup de grace. Jim Dahlmann (85) and Wayne Brown (far right) have already made the stop during action at the Northern League Preview two weeks ago.

Flag thrill tops 'em all, says Billy

OAKLAND (UPI) — There isn't a happier man in America today than Billy Williams and that's because he finally is on a winning team.

For 14 years Williams toiled, often spectacularly, for the Chicago Cubs and never once did the team come out on top.

Wednesday night the frustration of all those years came to an end for Williams when the Oakland A's, his new team, crushed the Chicago White Sox 13-2 to clinch the American League West for the fifth straight year.

When the game was over, there stood Williams in the middle of the A's clubhouse, alternately drinking from a bottle of champagne or dousing a teammate.

"Winning batting titles and MVP awards is great," said the 37-year-old veteran, who has had his individual share of great moments, "but nothing beats winning a team title. Of course, this is the first step and we have two more to go for the big one, the one that will top everything."

Winning a division title is old hat to such as Reggie Jackson, Sal Bando, Joe Rudi, Vida Blue, Ken Holtzman, Bert Campaneris and Gene Tenace, but all got in some celebrating Wednesday night, mostly because of Williams.

"I don't ever believe I've been happier than I am right now," said Holtzman, "and it's all because of Billy. Just seeing that look in his eyes is enough of a reward for me. For a guy who has given all that Billy has to baseball, this is a big moment. He's finally on a winner."

Seaver near-perfect; loses ballgame anyway

United Press International
Tom Seaver, the perfectionist, isn't happy about his latest flirtation with no-hit fame.

"My job is to win ball games," said the New York Mets' 21-game winner Wednesday after pitching six perfect innings and a no-hitter for 8 2-3 innings before the Mets lost to the Chicago Cubs 1-0 in 11 innings. "I want to pitch a no-hitter but if it happens, it happens. If it doesn't, it doesn't."

Seaver is well-known as his own worst critic so to most observers Wednesday's brilliant performance was a fitting, if unrewarding, windup to the 1975 season.

Seaver had two strikes on rookie Joe Wallis before Wallis looped a single to right field with two out in the ninth. It was the third time Seaver had a no-hitter in the ninth without achieving one. He has four one-hitters to his credit.

Seaver was relieved after yielding two more hits in the 10th and the Cubs went on to win in the 11th when Skip Lockwood walked Bill Madlock with the bases filled. Ken Crosby pitched the last two innings to win his first game for the Cubs.

Reds 6, Astros 4

Pete Rose's two-run single was the big blow of a three-run sixth inning rally which lifted Cincinnati to its 105th victory—the most by an NL team since the 1953 Brooklyn Dodgers. Clay Kirby went five innings to score his 10th victory against six losses while Larry Dierker was charged with his 16th loss against 14 wins.

Phillies 8, Pirates 1

Dick Allen knocked in three runs with two singles and Larry Christenson pitched a six-hitter for his 11th triumph for Philadelphia. Larry Demery was tagged for three runs and eight hits in five innings and lost his fifth decision for Pittsburgh.

Braves 7, Giants 6

Dave May drew a walk off Gary Lavelle with two out and the bases filled in the 11th inning giving Atlanta its victory. Elias Sosa pitched one inning to receive credit for the win while Jim Barr was the loser for San Francisco.

Dodgers 14, Padres 0

Steve Garvey knocked in six runs with a single, double and two homers and Lee Lacy had four hits in an 18-hit Los Angeles attack. Doug Rau won his 15th game and scored his second shutout with a six-hitter while Rich Fulkers lost his 11th game for San Diego.

Ali's brother backs champ all the way

BY MILTON RICHMAN

MANILA (UPI) — Muhammad Ali likes to turn it on and off, show you that hard, dark side of his as well as the soft, light one, and that's why he'll do something graceless or even cruel for no apparent reason sometimes.

This was one of those times, in his dressing room after a workout.

He was getting himself all worked up delivering one of those impassioned sermons he enjoys so much to the members of the media when, with that sharp hearing of his, he happened to pick up something his kid brother, Rahaman, was saying quietly to the press.

Rahaman became so carried away listening to his big brother's pearls of wisdom that he began urging newsmen around him to take notes.

"Write it!... write it!" he tried persuading them.

Hearing that, the champion suddenly cut short his own monologue.

"Shut up!" he ordered his brother. "Don't tell them to write it. Don't beg them. It doesn't matter whether they write it or not, the fight is goin' on anyway and everybody in the world is gonna hear about it."

Those who aren't aware of the relationship might think there is some resentment between Rahaman Ali and his 18-month older brother, who defends his heavyweight title against Joe Frazier here Oct. 1 (Sept. 30 in the U.S.).

There is no ill feeling between them whatsoever.

Rahaman Ali, who fought with undistinguished success, works for his brother, and if you ask doing what, the answer is doing anything his brother asks him to do.

For this, Muhammad Ali take pretty good care of his brother, bringing him along on all his trips, seeing to it nobody hassles him and paying him a nice, round $50,000 a year.

Rahaman's admiration for his big brother is genuine.

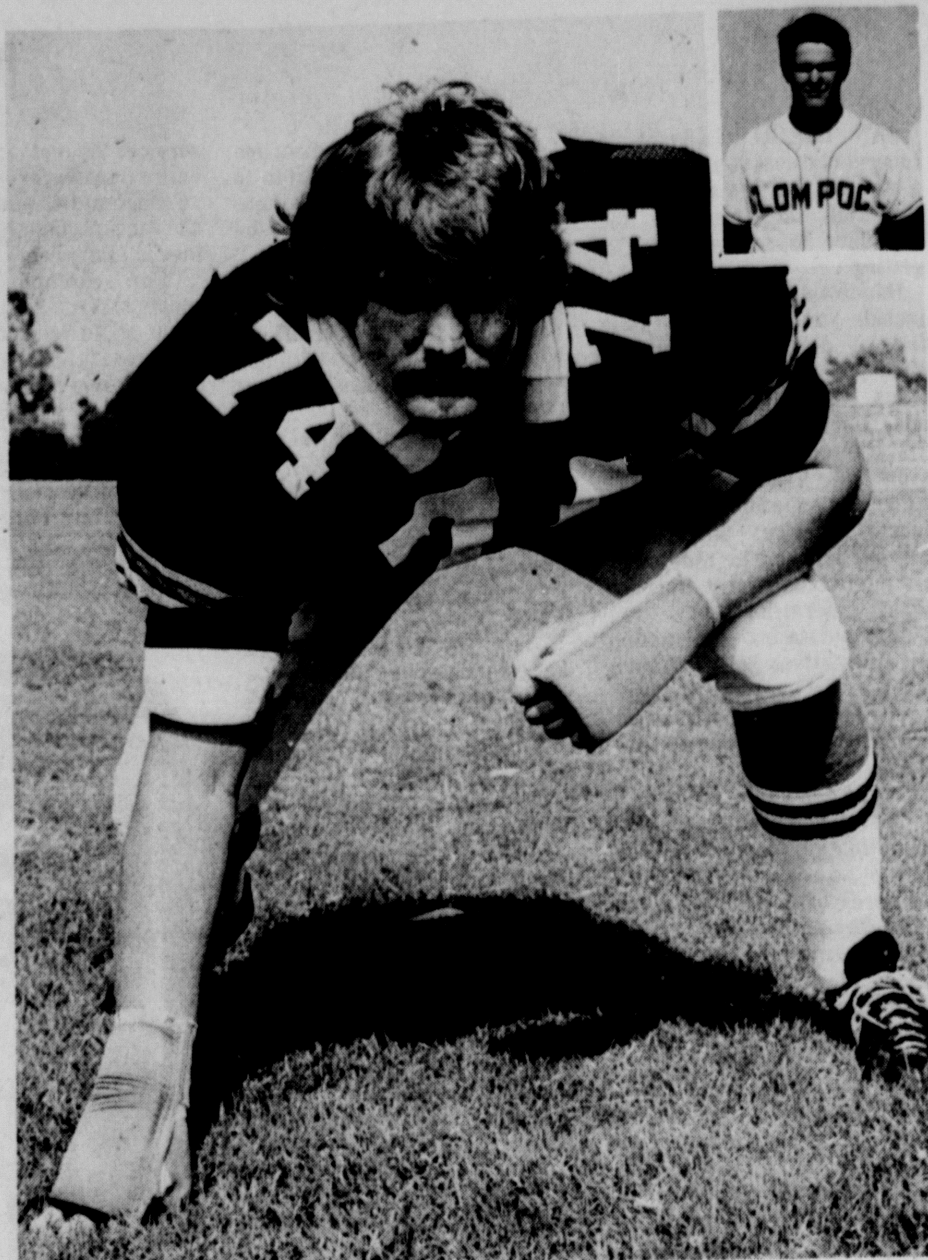

"I love him," he tells you right out. "How much? As much as any man can love his brother. You can not possibly put it into words. My love for my brother is endless."

What about the incident in the dressing room the other day?

"What he said to me was justified," says Rahaman. "He was correct. I know my brother and I know he means for my good."

When the champ worked out today, Rahaman was never more than a few feet away, generally with an expression of complete rapture on his face. When Muhammad did his situps on a trainer's table, Rahaman reached for his brother's shoes and held on to them as if they were the crown jewels.

The two brothers are the only children born to Cassius Marcellus Clay II and his wife, Odessa Lee. Being the older, Muhammad always has been his mother's pet but she has no less affection for her youngest son, Rahaman. "She has always told us to love one another and stay together," he says.

RUSS BOLINGER, former Lompoc High three-sport athlete, is now a 250-pound offensive tackle for the Cal State Long Beach 49ers. Bolinger switched over from tight end this year, and is being touted by the school as an all-America candidate and pro prospect. Inset photo shows Russ as a 6-2, 170-pound junior on the Lompoc baseball team five years ago.

'All-America potential'

Russ best on coast, insists 49er coach

Last season, when Russ Bolinger was a junior on the football team at Cal State University, Long Beach, his coach called him "the best tight end on the West Coast."

Russ was used primarily for blocking (he caught eight passes for 39 yards). This year the team found itself somewhat lean on interior blocking, so Russ was asked to switch to tackle.

"My speed is only average for a tight end," says Bolinger, explaining the move, "but I feel I have good quickness for a tackle." So he hit the weights, added 25 pounds to his already-solid 6-5, 225-pound frame, and became an offensive tackle.

This year his coach calls him "the best tackle on the West Coast."

Russ has apparently helped solve the interior blocking problem. Last week, Long Beach rolled up 392 yards on offense, 312 of those yards on the ground. In three games the 49ers have scored 73 points.

According to the 49er press book, which features Russ on the cover (along with his coach and one other player), "He has the strength and quickness to be a very high (pro) draft choice and a possible all-America."

He has given thought to a try at pro football.

"Since my parents live in Washington State, it might be nice to play with the new expansion team in Seattle," says Russ, whose older brother Monte is a pro baseball player in the St. Louis Cardinals' farm system. "But my main concern right now is winning the PCAA title. We have a good team (currently 2-1) this season, and I'm glad to be able to contribute any way I can."

Big Russ, who was a couple inches and about 65 pounds smaller then, earned six varsity letters at Lompoc High, competing in football, basketball and baseball.

After graduating from Lompoc in '72, Russ sifted through several offers and accepted a scholarship to U.C. Riverside. His coach there was Wayne Howard, and when Howard decided to move over to Long Beach last year, he persuaded Russ to come along.

"Coach Howard is not only a great coach, he's also a personal friend," says Bolinger. "He makes playing football fun, and motivates you to play well because he cares about each player."

Russ is an economics major. In addition to a possible pro football career, he would like to become a teacher. Who knows — he might become the best one on the West Coast.

Unhappy endings

Teams benched

JACKSON (UPI) — A weekend drinking party has benched most of the Jackson high school varsity football team, half the pep squad and about seven members of the girls basketball team.

Principal Richard Towner said most of the 24-member football squad admitted participating in the party last weekend and would be "temporarily ineligible" for a game Friday night with Colusa.

Towner said "about half" of the 14-member student pep squad and all but about five girls on the basketball team were suspended. The girls team, however, would be allowed to play its next scheduled game today, he said.

"It wasn't easy for anybody, but the kids were open and honest about it," he said.

Swimmer pooped

NEW YORK (UPI) — Diana Nyad, overcome by a driving rain, and turbulent tides, was pulled from the New York Harbor Wednesday seven miles short of a record-breaking swim around Manhattan.

But she said she would try again to break the record of 8 hours and 56 minutes set by Bryon Sommers in 1927.

Miss Nyad, 25, who was inoculated against hepatitis before she entered the water, was treated for exhaustion following her 5½-hour ordeal.

"I made pretty good time," she said. Miss Nyad, who got a few mouthfuls of brackish water during her aborted swim, said the dirtiest waterway was the Harlem River.

Asked if she recommended it for drinking, she replied: "I don't recommend it for swimming, frankly."

Bills, Oilers reject new offer

NEW YORK (UPI) — From the early indications, the proposed contract offer made Tuesday by National Football League owners will be rejected by the players.

The first returns on player balloting came in Wednesday and both the Buffalo Bills and the Houston Oilers voted to reject the contract. The Bills voted 42-1 against acceptance while no totals were released after the Houston balloting.

All votes are expected to be in by next Tuesday.

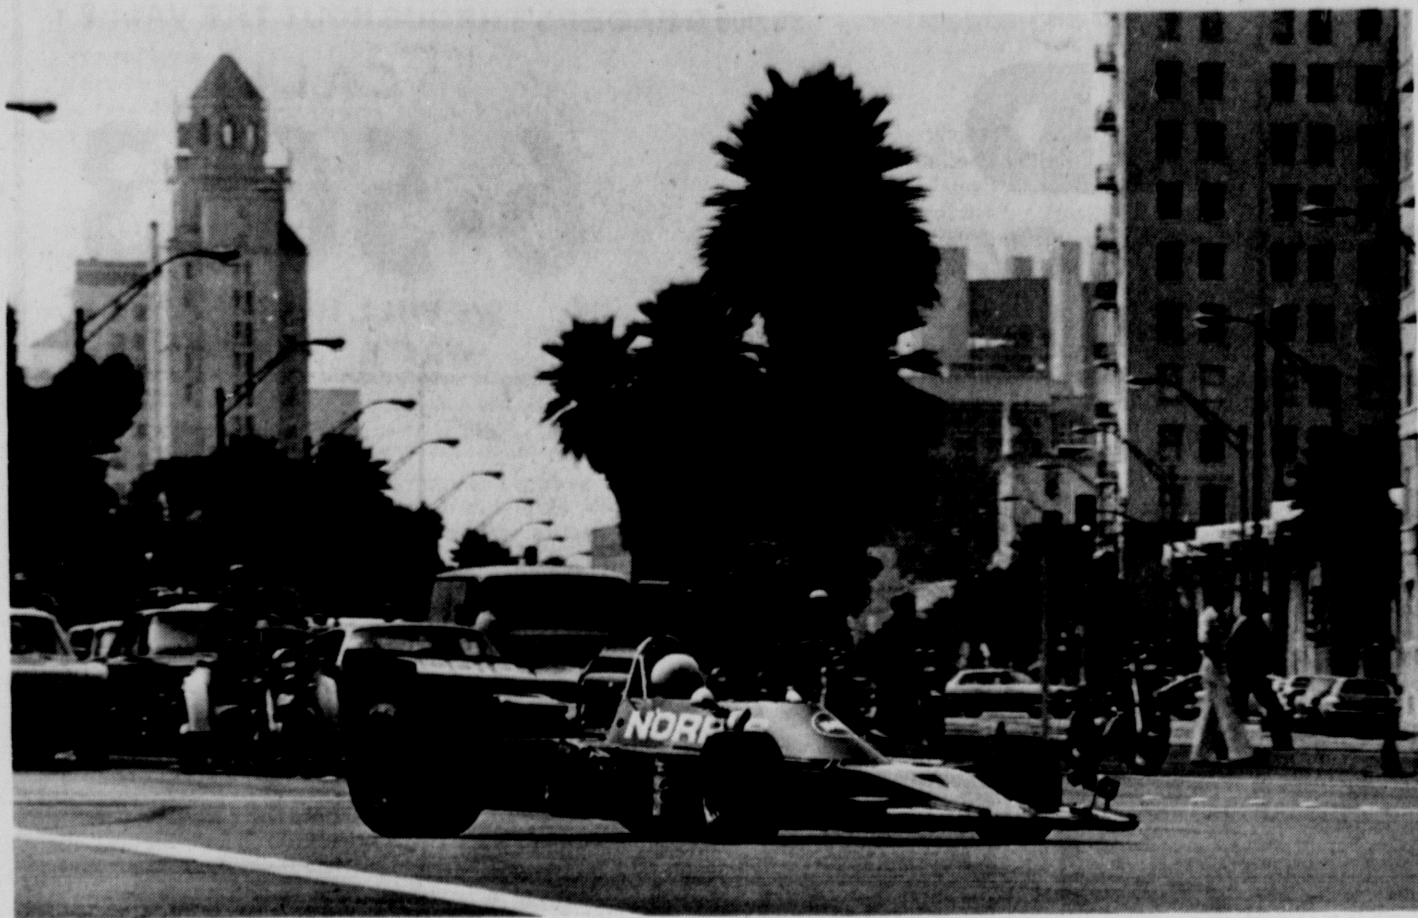

"There was no turnout of our offer by union leadership in Chicago," said Terry Bledsoe of the Management Council. "Ed Garvey (NFLPA executive director) told us five minutes before we broke that no decision had been taken by union leadership on recommending acceptance or rejection of the offer. Garvey said he was sending the proposal to the players without comment."

New England Patriots' player rep Randy Vataha said there would be no problem about Sunday's games going on but that the players will have to make up their own minds on accepting or rejecting the offer. Vataha said the issues still at large were the Rozelle rule, squad size and arbitration.

There was a report, however, that the Pats secretly voted to reject the owners' offer.

Most members of the Cincinnati Bengals, a team that voted not to side with the Pats in their initial walkout, were in favor of accepting the proposed contract that management claims is one of the best ever offered pro football players.

'Guns of Autumn' called cheap shot

"CBS News took its cheapest shot" at responsible hunters and professional wildlife managers in the recent "Guns of Autumn" television show, the California Fish and Game Commission charged this week in a letter to Richard S. Salant, CBS News president. The letter:

The California Fish and Game Commission vehemently objects to the subjective journalism exhibited by CBS News in its so-called documentary "Guns of Autumn" aired nationally on September 5, 1975.

The biased portrayal of hunters and professional wildlife biologists in America can only serve to further polarize the various groups concerned with the preservation of our nation's wildlife and habitat resources. This further polarization will, in all probability kindle the fires of misunderstanding and may well lead to the demise of more wildlife through fragmentation of the conservation movement than are presently taken through hunting programs. To vilify by association all hunters and professional wildlife managers by expounding upon the irresponsible and illegal acts of a few hunters is as objective as portraying all surgeons as "quacks" or all journalists as "muckrakers."

While much of the 90-minute program is subject to critical objective review, we would point out that many of the scenes depicted presently violate California laws; laws which were demanded by sportsmen and which have been in effect for many years.

In addition, it should be noted that the numerous positive aspects of hunting and wildlife management were purposely avoided. It is hoped, but not expected, that CBS News will give equal exposure to these positive aspects in the near future.

At best, it can be said that CBS News took its "cheapest shot" at the responsible hunters and professional wildlife managers of America with its "Guns of Autumn."

Net result of meeting is zero

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — Major league baseball owners met for nearly seven hours Wednesday and solved exactly nothing.

The owners and their representatives heard a proposal from the franchise committee but took no action.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn said he was "not gratified" by the day-long meeting in Kansas City Royals owner Ewing Kauffman's Sheraton Royal Hotel.

"No, we haven't made a decision on matters put before us," said Kuhn. "I wish we had, but I'm not surprised that we didn't."

Kuhn broke down the discussions concerning the Franchise Committee into four areas:

—The lack of baseball in Washington, D. C.

—The overexposure of baseball in the San Francisco-Oakland area.

—The pending lawsuit against the American League in Seattle.

—The financial problems of some teams.

Win at bridge

Lancelot's finesse traps knave

- He had no reason to try a finesse for the jack of that suit. When it failed to drop, it was all up to the heart suit.
- Lancelot stopped to analyze the opening lead and decided that if West had been dealt a five-card major suit he would have led it. Hence, his distribution would be 4-4-2-3.
- Thus hearts were going to break 4-2. After that analysis it was no problem to finesse against the jack of hearts and score the notrump game.

Ask the Jacobs

A reader from Quebec wants to know what he should have led from:

♠ 2 ♠ A Q 8 7 ♠ K Q 3 2 ♠ A Q 9 8

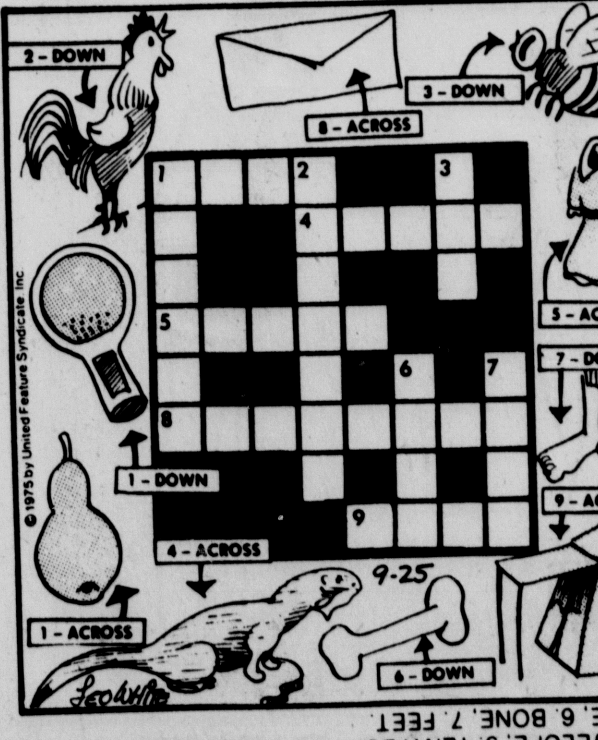

after his partner passed to his takeout double of a one spade opening bid.

There is an old expert convention here. This convention is when your partner passes your takeout double of a one bid, he wants you to lead a trump if you have one. Our correspondent should have opened his singleton trump.

(Do you have a question for the Jacobs? Write "Ask the Jacobs" care of this newspaper. The most interesting questions will be used in this column and writers will receive copies of JACOBY MODERN.)
